Question: How do you pronounce Feng Shui?

Lisa: Fung Shway

Question: How did you learn about Feng Shui?

Lisa: I learned about Feng Shui in an interior design class in 1997. I've been practicing ever since.

Question: What is Feng Shui?

Lisa: Feng Shui is the ancient art of placement. It helps people live in harmony with the energy of the environment. It believes that we are an extension of our surroundings and our spaces are an extension of us. So when the environment is supportive and nurturing it can bring about positive life-style changes.

Question: Are you going to tell me my front door faces the wrong direction?

Lisa: There are many schools of Feng Shui. Some are interested in astrology and where your front door is on a compass. My school of Feng Shui is more interested in how the energy moves through it. Doors in Feng Shui represent opportunities. So, I encourage people to beautify their front door and to declutter in and around it.

Question: What is the connection between Feng Shui and Clutter?

Lisa: Feng Shui encourages life force energy or chi to meander peacefully throughout your home--nurturing everyone and everything it encounters. If you have large amounts of clutter, the chi stops moving and creates blockages. This clutter can cause the person living there to get stuck and heavy too.

Question: How can Feng Shui help me?

Lisa: Feng Shui encourages you to look at all aspects of your life and environment. It examines how the energy is flowing in your career, relationships, health, prosperity, creativity, spirituality and overall well-being areas of your surroundings into balance, you will feel more peaceful and balanced, too.*

Question: Is it hard to learn Feng Shui?

Lisa: No. The workshops I offer are designed to give you simple, inexpensive tools you can use to get started. People find the classes fun and inspiring. I'd love to show you how to use Feng Shui!
